COOPERVISION AND ITS EMPLOYEES DONATE $100,000 TO SUPPORT OPTOMETRY GIVING SIGHT'S 2013 WORLD SIGHT DAY CHALLENGE

PLEASANTON, Calif., December 31, 2013 – CooperVision, Inc. (NYSE: COO) today announced $100,000 has been donated to Optometry Giving Sight in support of the 2013 World Sight Day Challenge. Employees in over 30 locations worldwide participated in a global fundraising campaign and organized local activities to help raise funds for the 2013 World Sight Day Challenge. The Cooper Companies, the parent company of CooperVision, proudly matched all employee donations.

"It is a great honor to help give the gift of sight and make a difference to the lives of millions of people through the noble work of Optometry Giving Sight," said John Weber, President of CooperVision. "We are extremely proud of the passion and generosity of our employees who have united together in support of a worthy cause."

"We applaud the fantastic effort from CooperVision and its employees in support of the World Sight Day Company Challenge," said Clive Miller, CEO of Optometry Giving Sight. "The funds that have been raised will help to transform the lives of thousands of people who are needlessly blind or vision impaired in underserved communities throughout the world. We are grateful for the passion, commitment and creativity of everyone involved and thank them sincerely for their support and participation."

About Optometry Giving Sight

Optometry Giving Sight is the only global fundraising initiative that specifically targets the prevention of blindness and impaired vision due to uncorrected refractive error. It was created in 2003 by the World Council of Optometry, the Brien Holden Vision Institute and the International Agency for the Prevention of Blindness as a means of mobilizing resources from the global eye care community to fund the development of sustainable eye and vision care projects in communities where these do not currently exist.
